Bell and Proctor realize that "they have their exits and their entrances."

John B. Moran is a small man physically, but he occupies a large political space in Massachusetts just now.

For a guess, we should say that Governor Proctor does not ride on a railroad pass. Certainly not after yesterday's utterances.

Vermonters are carried back nearly three decades to read about "Governor Proctor." Fletcher is the thirteenth governor since his father, but there's no significance in the order.

For such Burlington people as desire to drink water, a little advice: Equip yourself with a pocket stove and when thirsty sit down and boil a little of the essence of Lake Champlain.

This sale of diseased Vermont cattle to be eaten in Massachusetts recalls an exchange of wit between Senators Hoar and Proctor on the floor of the United States senate. Something had been said about the restrictions upon voting in Vermont, and the Massachusetts senator retorted to an observation from Mr. Proctor that "nobody votes in Vermont unless he has cheated a Massachusetts man at a horse trade." "Everybody votes in Vermont," assuringly replied the Vermont senator. The cattle commission exposure now leads to the inquiry whether they have adopted a new qualification for voting up that way—Springfield, Mass., Republican.

We are ashamed to have beaten Massachusetts on this cow deal—if we have—but rather like the horse trade story.

It is coincidence that a man by the name of Robt should succeed a man by the name of Duell on the supreme court bench of the District of Columbia, since robbing and duelling are generally taboos by justice.

P. W. Clement might make a joke out of that motto conspicuously shown at the governor's reception last night. The motto said: "Ring out the old; ring in the new"—governor. With a little by-play on the "ring," Clement would qualify for a punster, for his relations with Vermont politics have made him well acquainted with the Republican "ring."

It's safe to say that this has been the most strenuous week in the lives of a majority of the legislators gathered at Montpelier. But if they get through safely they should have their minds all settled for business when they return next week. There are more diverting things during the first week of the general assembly than during all the remainder of the two months' session.

CAUSE OF A FAIR'S SUCCESS.

And now the Valley fair of Brattleboro has come and gone, so that we are able to pass final judgment whether or not the agricultural exhibits of Vermont need to stand on any but their own bottom, whether a few of them should be subsidized. If one were to judge by the attendance at this year's Valley fair, there comes an emphatic "No" to the query. Twenty-two thousand pairs of lips sent back the answer and as many thousands more who would like to have attended but could not add their voice to the general refutation of the charge that agricultural fairs in Vermont are a thing of the past, unless they be permitted to thrust a hand into the state's pocket. The success of a fair must be judged largely by its attendance. People would not go if it had not come to their ears that there was something worth seeing. So attendance is the gauge of success. It seems that with anything like judicious management the Valley fair of this year ought to be able to make both ends meet and have the credit side lap over a trifle or more. Brattleboro is a town of perhaps 8,000 people, and Windham county contains something like 26,000. There were 22,000 persons in attendance at the fair last week, a number equal to about half the entire county. When half a county turns out to an exhibition it is to be marked as a failure? Of course the spectators did not all come from Windham county, but the comparison is made for purposes of illustrating the magnitude of the fair. The Valley fair draws from all over the southern and central sections of Vermont, as well as from neighboring states. The reason for this wide attraction is business-like advertising, after having something to advertise. That is what those financial failures lack; they do not advertise. We have in mind another Vermont agricultural exhibit, not a great way from Barre, which was accounted a success after a fashion, but which might have had three times the success if a slight attempt at advertising had been made. Let the people know what you have to offer, just as the merchant sets forth his wares. That is what Brattleboro did for its fair, and it is the great reason for its success. Not only do the managers make known through legitimate channels of advertising the importance of their exhibit, but the people as a whole take the tip and pass along the good word. They enter spiritedly into the proposition. Under such conditions, there really ought to be no fail to hold federal services for Vermont's agricultural exhibits just yet. Neither is there reason in a demand for state assistance.

Mrs. Mabel (Richardson) Hartson.

Plainfield, Oct. 5.—The funeral of Mabel Richardson, wife of William Hartson, was held from the home of her brother, Frank Richardson, where she was cared for the last two weeks of her life, on September 26. Rev. L. F. Fortney officiating. The burial was at Washington, her former home.

She leaves a husband, a small child, her mother, who came from Connecticut to care for her, and two sisters, Mrs. Bertrand of Connecticut and Mrs. Flinders of Washington, besides the brother at whose home she died.

The rich abundance of flowers were contributed by friends as follows: Heart of heliotrope and verbena, husband; roses and anemones, father and mother; broken circle of white carnations, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Flinders and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bertrand; wreath of pansies, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Taylor; mixed flowers, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hartson; pillow with name "Mabel," Augustus Foster and Clyde Bailey; bouquet nasturtiums, Mrs. B. D. Richards; geraniums, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bailey; bouquet foliage, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Moses; white carnations, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Bartlett; hydrangeas, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Richardson; pillow of white asters, Mrs. George Emery; white dahlias, Ernest Douse; asters, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Comstock; mixed flowers, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Parks.

THERE'S A MAN

Down in Worcester, Mass., Who Says

That he is the only man who makes a towel worth a name. Now whether that is so or not, he makes a good towel and makes the only one that has got a name, and the name is RUBDRY.

The Rubdry is made of a peculiar Egyptian cotton yarn. When woven into a towel it contains a million little sponges that absorb the water the moment it strikes the bather. They are used by the principal athletes and college men in this country and abroad, who appreciate a good bath towel. The fact that they do use this towel, we think is about as good a recommendation as it could have, and our experience is that every user endorses it.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

the truth about heating stoves before you invest in one. You have probably heard of the genuine ROUND OAK, made in Dowagiac, Michigan. It has made its mark as the best heating stove known; it has a record for success never equalled by any stove of any kind. It must have been good and it certainly satisfied its million users or it would not be the most popular and have the largest sale of any heating stove in this country. We wish you to know these facts and also that it has always been kept up to the high standard set by it in the start and that its cost is no more than an imitation. We take pleasure in explaining why it surpasses all others. And the fuel does not matter—any kind most convenient for you to secure. We invite you to see it. Remember there is only one "Round Oak," the genuine is sold by us.
